

HISTORY BEHIND LAZY LOAF AND KETTLE

Taste the Kettle bread and you know the recipe for the nine-grain, homemade, vegan loaf was not developed overnight. Relying on recipes handed down through generations, and adding a few of their own, the Labontes built the Lazy Loaf and Kettle into the thriving business it is today.

Adding a natural flair for hospitality to an old fashioned work ethic, they began their baking venture as a home-based business in 1989. By 1994, they were serving a regular, devoted customer base from the same location they are in today, in Parkdale Crescent.

Having expanded from 2 to 30 employees in over 20 years, the success of the Lazy Loaf proves the Labontes had the right combination by starting with and sticking to home-grown ingredients.

With so much goodness coming from its in-house bakery, locally roasted coffee, and fresh soup and sandwiches, it's easy to see why the Loaf is one of Calgary's favourite dining and catering spots.
